The new year will see lots of collaborations and improvements on the horizon of nephrology. It is of utmost importance that we continue to grow at individual institutions and take other institutions along to uplift the educational and patient care scenarios in Pakistan. This will help us to contribute significantly at the national and international level. We have a duty to our country as well as the international community to contribute our local data and improve upon the understanding of the kidney diseases as they develop.

There are lots of challenges and I am sure under the current leadership of Pakistan society of Nephrology we realize the changing horizons and the paradigm shifts that COVID has taught us so far
