In this Issue of PJKD a review article about often overlooked clinical complication of arteriovenous fistula i.e. pulmonary hypertension is detailed in a case report. Once AVF is closed, the symptomatology of patient improves dramatically. Further in this issue other causes of pulmonary hypertension among patients with hemodialysis patients are discussed in more detail by Dr. Roshina Anjum from the Lahore General Hospital, Lahore.

Such articles are going to contribute to the over incidence and prevalence studies from Pakistan. It is more important since we do not have a national registry and the data from other countries are also dependent on these individual reports from different centers in their countries. PJKD welcomes any descriptive data, since we believe that magnitude of the problem cannot be estimated and real numbers from our esteemed colleagues will ultimately help in taking the nephrology care in Pakistan to the next level.
