Pakistan Society of nephrology (PSN) has made tremendous efforts to promote research in Pakistan among the nephrology community. In this regard multiple meetings have seen some fruitful results including a journal club that has received great interest among our younger nephrology colleagues and residents in training.

PSN has reputedly stressed upon conducting multicenter studies to improve the research orientation in different centers to tap the individual capacities of the institutions for a greater good. It will also improve understanding and collaborations among different units.

This issue has 4 original articles and an interesting case report and a review article about one of the common causes of kidney disease in Pakistan, that is Kidney stones. I am sure our local data and interest in highlighting the issues and developing solutions within our country will have a beneficial spill over to our locoregional communities around us.
